

Well, during our Art in the last week of Summer Term A, Robins explored a variety of ideas.

We explored the therapeutic value of colouring. It is such an underrated activity, but one that we found can be a super way to develop understanding of colour composition, media skills, and also time for unpressured time out.

We also linked our Science theme of plants and our developing understanding of the environment to works of artists by looking at Agnes Denes, the adventure forest Bewilderwood's design and characters, and artists who work with mud. We then made mud seed-bomb characters. These we installed in the Forest School Area. We will be checking on our characters regularly to watch them slowly disappear but also grow!!! Now if that is not a contradiction in terms, we don't know what is!

With all this in mind, probably the two most important things we developed in this week is our understanding that art is more than pictures and clay; and that art is can be jolly messy learning sometimes made with an important hidden message!
